

Red was on his way to pick up new cargo from his Intel which was in the interest of the Arcona's Council.

The Cargo had a very important source of the information, which could help his Clan to stay a few steps forward from other Clans in discovering a new source of energy for a starship.

He followed the map provided with the marked spot of the meeting with a red cross. He never liked retrieving information in this way as he wasn't the best smooth talker. He followed the wall to the nearest gate taking him away from the center of Nar Shaddaa. Turned right, jumped across the nearest fence through the small pet graveyard.

He looked at the magnificent sculptures of the Porgs alongside the alley, and made steps forward a large chamber, which was builded in memory of the quite important Rancor which belonged to some very rich.

This was the place off the meeting.

He opened the doors to the inside of the building, and turned on the flashlight.

Straight in front of him he spotted a legs behind a statue of the Rancor. They didn't move though...

He went around the corner, and found out why - his informer, small Jawa, was shot from the blaster in the chest.

Archian just shook his head. He quickly checked the small body in the chance if there was any useful information, but there was nothing except a few pieces of equipment.

Then he heard someone coming close to the chamber. There was no time to check what was at the just found Audio Recording Rod. He grabbed it quickly and placed it at the side of the entrance doors, and set up autoplay for a 2 minute delay.

He also quickly glued the ring with some syntax flesh to the handle of the door, and waited. The doors slightly opened. Archian put a Nerf Towel at his head, and shouted.

"Do not come inside, there is too much radiation here." Obviously they didn't listen, and Red rightly assumed that these ate the same people who killed his informer.

He came from behind the statue, while holding the Radiation Detector and Glowrod.

He very quickly came closer and said.

"You see. Radiation!" He pointed at the the screen. Also unexpectedly turn on Glowrod and blinded two Zabraks standing at the front of him.

He passed them quickly, and at the same time Gamorrean Opera played from the earlier set up machine.

The shouts from the chamber were muted. But Archian couldn't avoid noticing a louder scream of someone hurting himself from the poison inside of the set up earlier ring, from the doors which he closed when he left the chamber.

He ran to the exit, but two humans stood backwards to him, searching for a source of the music. He tossed dental floss, and dice in front of them to take their attention. And punched one of them with the previously taken keys, as he didn't take any own weapons with him. Opponent fell unconscious on the ground.

The other human tried to punch, now spotted Archian, but Aedile shot him with the blaster from the informer's dead body.

Archian needed to retreat, and he stayed covered with the Nerf Towel until he was hidden in the shadows on the nearest street. He was safe now, and went for a drink.