

The Speculation Awakens

Mako Henymory - 7640

It is of the greatest concern that we uncover who Supreme Leader Snoke is. I propose to that end we simply look to Naboo the planet that gave us Palpatine most certainly gave us Snoke as well. As such it is only logical to conclude that Supreme Leader Snoke is none other than Padme Amidala.

Most certainly, you say that Padme was dead, the medical droid said as much in that one scene. Well did the medical droid run any tests? did the medical droid reference any equipment? NO, the medical droid looked at her face and said they had lost her. With other major characters that died in the series we saw a funeral pyre confirming the body was destroyed. Did we see that with Padme? No, so it is obvious that Padme was not really dead. The Medical droid would have most certainly began the process of incinerating the body which seems like the standard practice in the Star Wars Universe. Well Padme had simply passed out from exhaustion of chasing her husband across the galaxy, getting force choked, then giving birth to twins. During the beginning of the incineration process she woke up, and the droid realizing his mistake stopped the sequence but not soon enough to stop permanent and severe damage to her flesh. This would in turn make her indistinguishable as being a man or a woman and have caused the head trauma Snoke obviously has.

But Snoke is training Kylo Ryn as a sith/Dark Jedi. Padme was close to the Jedi, even married one. She would be familiar with their training methods and it is unknown if Snoke, herself, has the ability to use the Force. It is stated that Snoke was involved in the Clone Wars, Padme was involved in the Clone Wars from the very first incident to the very last. She would obviously have the motivation after years of isolation and recovery, to bring the New Republic down. Seeing the flaws in the New republic she sets out to bring back the Old Republic, utilizing the First Order to do so.

Wanting to help further Anakin's dream and being ashamed of not going to her husband because of how her body looked, yet still deeply in love with him. She wants to fulfill Anakin Skywalker's not Darth Vader's dream of maintaining the Old Republic. Not knowing who her children were or that her husband had become Darth Vader she would launch her campaign to finish off the New Republic and once again bring true order and stability to the Galaxy with the return of the real Republic.