

Kiast : Landing Pad

Resting high above the toxic surface of the planet Kiast this landing pad is large enough to accommodate a ship as large as a GR-75 Medium Transport. It is a wide flat expanse of durasteel connected to a large skyhook by a narrow bridge. There are no guard rails to stop those either to stupid or clumsy from falling to their inevitable death with the only warning you are approaching the edge being a set of lights around the landing pads edge.

Vicious winds whip past the landing pad pulling at clothes and hair, threatening to fling the unwary over the edge. High above large avian scavengers ride the thermals circling and waiting for for someone to fall before they swoop down to pick the bones clean before their meal disappears into the toxic mists below.