

Thanatophilia

34 ABY

Livana sighed to herself as she entered the meeting, flipping open her fan and covering her face from the nose down. It was less formal than the Major expected. Adjusting her uniform, the half-Echani approached her teammates and pulled the Miraluka to the side. If the humanoid had eyes, Liv was sure he'd be glaring at her. "Major Livana Agrona," she stated introducing herself to the man.

"Revs, Former Shadow Gate XO."

"Oh, I know who you are. I have heard many things about the infamous Raven Yager." the woman stated.

Looking at the woman, the Miraluka cleared his throat and put on a charming smile. "It honours me that a woman such as yourself has taken the time to remember stories of a dashing rogue such as myself."

"Calm down there, Romeo. I'm married." The Major stated. Itsy finally managed to unbutton her bag and climb up her back to his perch on her shoulder, chittering angrily at the Eldarian.

"Well, I'm sure your husband wouldn't mind a girl as beautiful as yourself."

"Wife, happily married, and I'd like to stay that way." the Major stated cutting the man off with a cold undertone. Her eyes pierced through him like finely sharpened blades. "I was looking for intelligent conversation; however, I must take my leave if you aren't going to be mature about my interest in talking to you."

Livana could tell the Former Executive Officer wasn't happy as she walked away, though she didn't quite care seeing as she abhorred men flirting with her.

After strolling around for a moment, she joined in with another member who was off in a corner watching the festivities take place.

"Kind of cozy back here." the Eldarian stated as she fell in next to the half Ryn.

"Yes." Zujenia replied feeling quite uncomfortable.

"I'm not much of a people person either to be honest."

"Really."

"Nope, I just about despise every singular moment that i have to spend around large groups of people."

"Fascinating."

"Quite."

Livana could tell that the other woman had trust issues. "Don't worry, I won't judge you. I personally think that this whole undesirable thing is nothing more than a heap of racism, and senseless violence put into place by a man who is afraid of losing power to a silent majority. However, you didn't hear that from me." she said with a gentle grin behind her fan.

"It must be easy for a human noble to have such views." Zuji muttered.

"Half-Echani, actually... Though most don't know that. I have managed to keep a lid on my origins since the whole undesirable thing had come around."

The half-Ryn remained silent, though the Equite understood how the woman felt. life in the brotherhood was not easy when the main leadership saw your existence as a minor setback for the galaxy as a whole. Itsy leaned over to Zujenia and sniffed at her nearly falling off of Livana's shoulder. This made the other woman chuckle.

"I am so sorry. Itsy is a tad nosey." the Eldarian apologized.

"It's quite alright."

For the rest of the night, the pair stood on the sidelines watching the events unfold before them. After a few hours, Elaine came to join the pair; however, the party seemed to stay a distance away as they stood consumed by the shadows.