Sturdy Weapon with a Kick

The overall appearance is unassuming, but this weapon is accurate and easy to use. It's not too heavy, the balance is perfect, and the tension on the trigger is well-adjusted. Although touted as a compact design it's a bit too large to be easily concealed. However, that extra size comes from an enlarged power core and a heavy frame that allow it to fire charged rounds. The main drawback that I found was that when you do charge it like that, the weapon tends to overheat, so that's definitely something to watch out for.

Gets the Job Done

This gatekeeper droid from Serv-O-Droid fulfills its purpose – it screens visitors. However, the overall appearance leaves something to be desired, and my model seem to have an attitude. When did they start programming droids to be rude to visitors?! I mean, yes, my mother-in-law can be a bit much, but that doesn't mean I want my droid to insult her. It's pretty easy to install though. As a droid there's no external wiring required because it contains its own power source. All you have to do is mount it to the door.

Where Are My Eyebrows?

You may think that accidentally singeing off your own eyebrows would be a drawback. You would be wrong. This thing can shoot flame up to 75 meters, burning everything in its path. The conflagrine-14 gel really does its job. Another cool thing is that the fuel source is portable, you just wear it on your back! Oh, and did I mention that the gun has a double barrel for double the fun? Don't be afraid to try this out yourself, it's totally safe as long as you follow the proper handling procedures.
