Fear. Fear was something Kadne had to live with every day working for Scion. It was a similar feeling when Kadne woke up tied to a chair. When Kadne looked up, one of the suits was sitting, smiling again.

“Forgive us daughter,” the man smiled even wider “we had to take precautions, you understand? While doing our holy work there are blasphemers everywhere that would have you stray from the path of light.” As the man was talking, Kadne shifted in the bonds to see if any of them were loose.

“Now we are very excited about you joining us, daughter.” the man reached into a bag. “But, I need to ask you some questions.

“Ok, I would have told you the truth even without the rope and chair.” Kadne looked around the room, but it was bare except for the table and two chairs. The door was behind the man.

“First off, do you know anything about a person named Jahad Kard?” The man had a piercing glance. Watching. Judging. Kadne didn’t think anyone from Tarentum would even noticed she had died a horrible death.

“I’ve never heard of that name before in my life.”

The man smiled at Kadne’s response. “Very good, now for the next question. Have you.....”

A few hours later

“Ok Kadne, that will be all for today. We are very happy with your assessment so far.” The man stood up, walked behind Kadne and released her from her bindings.

Kadne was numb for being tied up for so long. She gave her best smile she could, but was thinking a thousand different ways to get away. ‘Find your chance and run. Come on Kadne think, you've been in worse positions.’

Along the way to wherever the man was leading her, Kadne got a chance to pass through the operations command of the Seekers. Kadne quickly looked for anything she could pocket and bring to Scion. Glancing around Kadne saw a holodisk on the main table that looked important. Kadne pretended to trip and slid the holodisk in her boot.

Kadne was thinking about how she could escape she didn't realize the suit was talking to her. “I'm sorry, I was lost in thought.”

The man gave the same exact smile he always gave. “That's alright daughter, I know you are very excited for being part of the Light. But, be patient, we will be making our move soon. For now we are moving you to a different house.”

Suddenly Kadne was shoved to the ground. Kadne started to yell, but was quickly punched. Everything started to become unfocused and Kadne could only see the face of the man in the suit. He was smiling the same exact smile, but now he had a cold, animalistic look that she seen from Hades. Before Kadne could say a thing the man pulled a Westar-34 from his jacket and shot Kadne in the upper leg. The pain made Kadne scream.

The man knelt down next to her “You think we couldn't tell who you worked for? We know you work for the.. Those...” He shook his head and screamed “THOSE HEATHEN'S. We are going to find our god soon and when we do, all of you infidel's will be punished for your sins. If we have to start somewhere, I guess we will start with YOU.” The man hit her and told a couple of goons that came out of the shadows to kill and dispose of her. They grabbed her and tossed her in the trunk.

Kadne wasn't checked she was grateful for that, but had her eyes covered. Kadne had no idea how long she was in the back of the speeder. She was taken to a warehouse and tossed out.

Kadne tried to run away, but the pain made the effort very agonizing. Kadne fell, but kept trying to get away while battling her tears. The thug grabbed the back of Kadne's head and laughed as he put his blaster against the back of her head and then.... Click Kadne looked up to see the two thugs that were supposed to be her executors smiling. But she couldn't see bloodthirst in their eyes. One of the two started to talk on his comlink.

“We have her boss. She's been shot, but nothing life threatening I think.” There was a slight pause. “Yes boss, we will be there shortly.”

He looked at Kadne. “You have no idea how lucky you are.”

“I don't 'feel' lucky, but i guess you are right, i'm alive.” Kadne was trying to keep the intense pain from overtaking her again. “By the way, WHY am I alive?”

The two looked confusedly at each other. The second one one explained that they were thugs that worked for the Nekros. They had been in deep cover and worked for Solas, they were only to help if it worked for them. Solas was now sending his second in command to escort her out and back to Tarentum space. In the first time Kadne was glad that she was a part of Tarentum.

Scion was rubbing his forehead. Things were quickly falling and he could feel like slow march of time make Scion think about the good old days. Kadne just left giving her report on what happened with her search. The Seekers knew they were being hunted, that wasn't a good sign. Scion was skeptical of the stunt that Solas took, but Scion guessed they did something useful as Scion turned the data disk in his hand. Over and over, thought after thought. Scion suddenly stopped. No more thinking of the past, it was time for action.

Scion sent a message to all of his leaders. It's time to fight.
