“Hey Reiden,” Jorm said as he walked over. “How’s it going?”

“Oh, hi Jorm. Good I guess. I’m still trying to get used to living on this med station for the moment,” Reiden replied.

“Yeah, I hear ya. Say, you want to go out and see if we can find something to steal? Maybe make a few big booms?” the Kiffar questioned.

Reiden laughed, “Jorm, not everything can be exploded. And, to be honest, most people don’t find it nearly as amusing as you do.”

“Oh, come on,” the Kiffar said, a wicked grin splitting his face. “You know you had fun on that space walk with me when we stole that Venator-class Destroyer with me and the others.”

“Yeah. That actually was pretty cool. Haven’t done things like that often.”

“See? What’d I tell ya?” Jorm cackled with glee.

Reiden sighed and shook his head, “Okay Jorm, fine. You win. Let’s go see what kind of mischief we can get up to.”

“Whooo! Did you see the size of that explosion?!” Jorm crowed.

“How could I not? That was huge!” Reiden said with a laugh.

“Come on, I’ve got another idea for us to do.”

“Lead the way, you crazy fwecker!”

“Okay, shh! This is where we’ve got to be quiet. I think someone’s coming in,” Jorm said in a hushed tone.

“Okay, okay. You be quiet too then,” Reiden whispered.

SPLASH!

“Quick, let’s get out of here,” Jorm said.

“Gee, ya think?” Reiden retorted as they bolted.

“Oh gods, that was too much fun!” Jorm elated.

“Yeah, it really was. I never thought using such a small amount of explosive on a refresher would be so entertaining.”

“That’s why you’ve gotta stick with me, Rei,” Jorm said with a wider grin than usual.

“But, man, Lex is gonna be so pissed if he finds out that I was involved in blowing up that refresher while he was using it,” Reiden lamented.

“Are you kidding me? Did you see how high we launched him?”

“Oh yeah, that was fwecking epic! That squid got some serious hang time for a moment there!”
