

Name: Atkor Kes
Species: Deshade
Height: 2.2 Meters
Eyes: Black
Skin color: Olive Green
Age: 35 Years

Description

Atkor is a towering figure, standing at 2.2 meters tall. Green skin stretches across clearly defined muscle mass, the effect of years of training and getting stronger. His features are hardened due to years of working, his face most often seen with a neutral frown. Lacking hair, Atkor has several scars that can clearly be seen on his face and head. Black eyes see more than his large, sharp toothed mouth speaks.

His clothing is casual and basic when working on the farmhouse, often sporting patches of dirt or sweat. Holes are patched as often as needed, and it's clear that he's had his clothing for quite awhile.

When hunting targets with his mercenary work, Atkor has a much more practical set of armor, fully covering his arms and legs. A plain, dark cape attaches at his shoulders, a hood drawn up over his face.

Life

Raised as a mercenary on Coruscant, Atkor quickly showed that he planned to excel to the highest ranks possible in his work. He was often paid to take out force sensitive targets, like many of his species before him. By his teenage years, he had climbed to the highest position possible for someone of his age and experience.

However, a job he was given with a partner quickly knocked that plan out from under him. His partner had planned to betray him all along, and Atkor narrowly escaped, fleeing the planet in search of somewhere a little less crowded.

Aliso seemed like a perfect place to settle, and Atkor had a farmhouse built, and began to have creatures from other planets brought in as an attempt to start a cover business as a breeder and seller of different mounts and animals. The speed in which his business sprang up looked to some as though he was receiving funds and materials from someone else, though no one could be certain whether that came from contacts off world, or perhaps a past employer on Aliso itself.

While at one point, Atkor wasn't choosy with the jobs he took, after being betrayed and almost killed by a light side user of the force, he's developed a bit of a bias against Jedi and other light force users. He's got no problem with jobs from the force users of Aliso, however, as they seem to be either non force user targets, or light side force users. It's a win win for him to be situated on such a planet.

Personality

Atkor is generally quiet, and doesn't spend a lot of time speaking. He prefers to let his work speak for him, whether that's the top quality mounts he sells, the training he provides, or the kills he provides.

His experiences and life lessons have left him decently paranoid, though he does his best to hide this. He feels most comfortable at home, though doesn't mind travelling as long as it's for work.

Despite his large size, Atkor has a fairly gentle nature when not doing mercenary work. His animals trust him and he treats them with kindness, knowing that positive reinforcement has a less likely chance of the creature turning on their new owners once they're sold. He's well aware of his size and strength, and has grown excellent at keeping this in mind when interacting with others.

Aspects

Gentle Giant

Though not lacking in the strength department, Atkor knows when to use his strength and when to be careful with it. He does not needlessly destroy things, and takes caution when doing things like shaking hands or going through doorways not built for his height.

I can fix that

If it has an electronic circuit or gears, Atkor thinks he can fix it; everything from holopads to starships. To Atkor, even the most random assortment of scraps from a junkyard can be used to create something useful. He has a knack for fixing things that are broken, and his confidence in this ability borders on arrogance, and if he fails to fix something, he is prone to fits of anger and annoyance.

Lone Wolf

Atkor doesn't like to work in groups or teams and feels most comfortable on his own. Atkor sticks to himself, sets his own pace, and doesn't share feelings or emotions with others. While the Lone Wolf can get things done quietly and efficiently, he tends to be emotionally cut off and has problems relating to his comrades.

My fees are high for a reason

Atkor does not charge a high price because he has to pay for a life of luxury; he charges a high price because he knows that he is the best in the game and worth the credits. Those who do not know Atkor will feel he is gouging them, but those who have seen him in action know that he always delivers. This bravado follows Atkor around and builds on the success of completed jobs and can be off-putting to other Mercenaries that will try and lash back by pointing out his failures.

Straight Shooter

Atkor tells it like he sees it, when he thinks it; and he doesn't try to sugarcoat what he says.

Showoff

If there's a chance for Atkor to show off his strength, he'll usually take it. Whether it's lifting something heavy for someone or accepting the challenge of a fight from a much smaller target, he takes great pride in the strength he's worked to achieve and won't hesitate to put others in their place should they challenge him.