Eko Lepidus

Reaver, Order of the Mercenary
Director, Human Male, Left Handed

Height: 1.98m / 6'6"ft.

Weight: 116.12kgs / 256lbs

Age: 46

Physical Description

Eko towers over many of his male human counterparts. His burly stature allows him to look more muscular than he actually is. His dark complexion is almost identically matched by the color of his hair, which he keeps in a tight afro style. His face and left shoulder are adorned with scarring. His facial hair is kept neat and orderly, running along his jawline and up into a goatee. Underneath his glasses, his light grey eyes stand as an anomaly against his dark skin.

Eko can almost always be found wearing dark colored robes, offering a humble appearance. He wears no jewelry, but will always conceal a bladed weapon, usually around his ankle.

General Aspects
Due Diligence When Eko Lepidus does things, he makes sure everything is done correctly, no matter how long it takes. This means there are frequent delays in Eko Lepidus' work, but it's usually done right, at least.		Resourceful Researcher Eko Lepidus' life is filled with training and learning for all sorts of situations, from the mind-numbingly normal to the utterly bizarre. As such, Eko Lepidus has developed into a rather resourceful individual. This has made Eko Lepidus a mix of academic and scholar, always with something to offer to any discussion. However, knowledge and training does not always translate well to the tense environment of the battlefield, and no amount of textbooks can prepare one for reality...
Personality Aspects
All Who Gain Power... All who gain power are afraid to lose it, and Eko Lepidus is no exception. Some use their power for good, some for evil; Eko Lepidus, however, knows that these are just points of view. He is on a quest for greater power, and uses all his skills and abilities to ensure his supremacy, regardless of the consequences.		False Idol People tend to reverently follow Eko Lepidus' lead and look up to him in difficult situations. Whether through inspirational behaviour, fear and manipulation, or belief and hope for a better future, they think that Eko Lepidus genuinely believes what he does. This is all a clever facade, however, as Eko Lepidus is not always as upstanding and respectable as his followers believe. He is no idol, but an opportunist who knows how to manipulate a crowd into bettering his own machinations.
Combat Aspects
He's No Good To Me Dead Eko Lepidus doesn't like to kill people; instead he chooses to injure his opponent until that person is unable to fight back or is otherwise incapacitated.		Puppeteer Eko Lepidus seems to get his thrills, perhaps sadistic ones at that, from toying with his opponents. Some are content with simply striking down or injuring their opponent, but that is not enough for Eko Lepidus. No, he wishes to see his enemy descend into madness or kneel before him as a blathering mess; or even better, as a fresh new servant with a muddled mind. The Puppeteer usually forsakes outrightly hurting and maiming his opponent and focuses on illusions, mind tricks, and other wicked means of destroying a person.

Notes/Extra

Eko Tunde is the leader of a growing underground religious cult financed through the sale of illegal substances and slaving operations. While Eko portrays himself to be Holy, the Clan is very much aware of his sinful nature, and often will offer personnel and funding to ensure that his missions succeed. Eko, however, shows little to no loyalty to Clan Plagueis, outside of the occasional slave donations. Plaguein authorities expect his full cooperation when the time comes. Like most religious leaders, he is very charismatic and is viewed in high regards by his followers.
