

CORDANA VALLEY

Nestled between the two largest mountains on Aliso, Mt. Thilan and Mt. Rapso, lies the evolving Cordana Valley. This plateau consists of a wide variety of flora and fauna that change the ecosystem daily. The tree growth has been steadily growing, but there lacks an forest of note in the valley. The main attraction is Braun River, the main source of water for much of Aliso. The river winds its way through the valley, carving out canyons and forming numerous estuaries that feed into it. These unique areas attract various animals that tend to live peacefully. The recent Plagueis encampment on the planet introduced sentient lifeforms to the Valley. Many residents of Aliso City rever this as a sanctuary to the planet and use it for recreational purposes.

Though there are no official establishments in the Valley, during the warmer days of the constant autumn season, a few ambitious Alisoans set up shop, selling items needed to survive a long weekend in the Valley. The true adventure seekers often climb either mountain to vie for the best campsites that offer stunning views of either a sunset or sunrise.

While many residents love the beauty of the Valley, Clan Plagueis view it as a potential site for live military training operations. The mountains offer great hiding spots for training snipers, while the ground gives many opportunities to train infantry soldiers. The bodies of those who don't make it through could be thrown into the river, and carried away into the ocean. The Dread Lord has sent many expositions into the valley to take proper measurements to erect a military base fit with barracks and a weapons depot.
