Physical Description Aemilius Crassus is above average height for a Muun. This is the only distinguishing feature he possesses. His head is elongated with a bald cranium; his facial features are small, flat and slim. His fingers, legs, and torso are all spindly when compared to the average sentient. His skin is pale, contrasting with his dark brown eyes. In short if one were to look at an average Muun, they'd see a slightly smaller version of Aemilius.		Loadout Weapons Unarmed
General Aspects
Loyal Triumvir Aemilius Crassus is very loyal to two things, credits and the Severian Principate. This dual-allegiance can cause him difficulties when situations that bring the two into conflict. In such situations, he is prone to seeking out advice from his fellow Triumvirs, each with their own biases. This could result in Aemilius being seen as the "weakest" of the Triumvirs but also can increase the regard with which his colleagues hold him. Background

Aemilius Crassus is a former property tycoon from an ex-Imperial family who through his hard work and connections to various charitable individuals as well as businesses managed to obtain the position of Triumvir for Social Administration. A compassionate individual at heart, Aemilius is one of the most anti-First Order members of the Principate, due to their dogmatic worship of the Empire's worst atrocities. Aemilius achieved his success in the private sector due to an extensive knowledge of regulations and their limits and continues to use his extensive knowledge to help guide the Severian Principate towards being a utilitarian state.
