

Mines of Lyra:

Among the hollowed tunnels on the Moon of Thillon lay vast chambers of Kyber reservoirs. The dark tunnels are illuminated by artificial light with magnetic tracks lining the many spiraling corridors. The rock walls are jagged and consist of many mineral hues. Where Kyber is visible, the brilliant crystals seem to emanate a strange power, their connection to the Force abundantly clear.

Several research stations are spread out among the caverns. Once owned and operated solely by the Severian Principate, the Collective has now left their mark upon this moon. Holopads and computer terminals are laid out in circular sections of the rocky caverns, connected by thick cables that run along the cavern floors. This technology is easily discerned from the rest of the great mining cave system.
