Lyra Colony - Ordu Aspectu Temple

In a cavern beneath the teeming housing complexes of Lyra Colony lies a temple dedicated to the ancient Jedi splinter group, the Ordu Aspectu. In the murky gloom, ancient structures are ever so slowly decaying, succumbing to the ravages of time. The ground is uneven, riddled with stalagmites and chunks of growing crystal. These crystals provide enough bioluminescent light for a normal human to see by, complimented by occasional shafts of sunlight that pierce down through the roof of the cavern.

The temple complex is dotted with statues, their features pitted and worn and constantly in danger of falling. Defunct technological creations also lie scattered around the ruins, dormant and rusting, but a sign of the activity that once consumed this place. There have been numerous archaeological digs over the years to uncover the secrets of the temple; some have discovered incredible things, while others merely disturbed the nests of mynocks which have made parts of the temple their home.

There are still parts of the temple that remain undisturbed, built deep into the ground. The Force weighs heavy on this place, and there is a constant sense of palpable unease emanating from the lowest chambers - the feeling of being watched. Little is known about the Ordu Aspectu, but rumours of human sacrifice in the pursuit of immortality give their temple a grim atmosphere for any Force user.
