

Ordu Aspectu Grand Atrium

Deep within the caverns below the [Lyra Colony], the temple of an ancient order lie in ruins. Twisting passages bore through the soil and rock, eventually opening to reveal the crystalline facing of the Ordu Aspectu temple. No door closes up the secrets that the temple one held. It appears the ravages of time or the work of careless archeologists have stripped the temple of its front aperture. As one approaches the temple, the full beauty of the Grand Atrium can be seen.

After passing where the front-facing doors once stood, one will see the crystalline surfaces of the temple glowing warmly as beings approach. Several short columns topped with flat surfaces line a darker-crystal walkway leading to an intact door that appears to be constructed of ebony glass. Several stairways, made of varying, lighter shades of deep greens twist up to a higher level from which the whole of the Atrium can be viewed. Several doorways are cut smoothly into the walls surrounding the atrium, with arcane symbols etched into their surfaces.

Not all these things have been left undamaged. Several of the columns which one held artifacts before the coming of the Imperial Reclamation Surface have been knocked over or scratched up. Scores and burning can be found in other areas of the Atrium, where a battle between two opposing groups of plunderers appear to have occurred. The abandoned remains of droids and excavation equipment are littered across the Grand Atrium, giving raiders and wanderers plenty of spots to hide or duck behind.

Old legends tell of the Ordu Aspectu and their ways. Though they have vanished, surely not all the secrets held by the temple have been removed, or even discovered.