Merchandising:

The first option for merchandising is the classic Star Wars staple: toys! Action figures, ship models, books, whatever you can think up is on the table here. A second option for merchandising can be making a deal with Dole to put pictures of the actors on their bags of salad. As shown by the marketing strategy for the Sequel Trilogy films, this is apparently a thing that is worth doing and would definitely prove beneficial. Finally, a third option we can tackle is releasing a series of short behind the scenes documentaries weekly leading up to the movie's release. Of course, these would be carefully created to avoid any spoilers, but would hopefully assist in driving interest.

First Scene Cast:

Kel Zar and Laren Uscot along with some extras

First Scene:

EXT. NIGHT - NAR SHADAA

After the opening crawl, the camera pans down to NAR SHADDAA. We see KEL ZAR's ship fly up past the camera, descending towards the planet. We follow the ship down through the atmosphere until it lands in a busy city. KEL ZAR exits the ship, clearly in a bad mood, and begins to walk down the street, clearly angry. She makes her way into a bar and we have the obligatory A NEW HOPE cantina entrance callback scene. When KEL ZAR makes her way to the bar and begins nursing a drink, her and our attention are drawn to a nearby LAREN who is loudly talking to the barkeep while clearly a bit buzzed. The barkeep doesn't seem interested.

LAREN

I promise you, one punch, and that guy was on the floor. The whole place was on their feet, really, I promise.

KEL ZAR, deciding she could use a distraction from her own foul mood, slid over to sit next to LAREN.

KEL ZAR

Sounds like you live an exciting life.

LAREN

That barely scratches the surface. Lemme tell you about the time-

KEL ZAR

First...

KEL ZAR motions to the barkeep.

KEL ZAR

Let's get some fresh drinks.

The barkeep brings over a pair of shots. LAREN scoops up one and holds it up for a toast.

LAREN

To the nerfherders who've crossed us!

KEL ZAR toasts him.

LAREN

So, lemme tell you about this place called the DARK BROTHERHOOD.

KEL ZAR leans forward, intrigued.

KEL ZAR

Oh, I'm very familiar with the BROTHERHOOD...

The camera pans out as the two begin to talk in earnest.
