Lodestar Artifact Map

This datapad has been formed to look like a stone tablet, including the display screen. The object is the creation of ancient archivists from centuries long ago, made of stone initially but later converted to modern metals made to look like stone. The screen is still interactive, but appears as engraved text and figures to maintain the feel of ancient tablets and researchers.

Used by Lodestars in the Shadow Academy to send out their orders and maps for Surveyors and others looking for artifacts, these specially encoded tablets had many secrets of the society. When in range of SAS-controlled computer systems, they could be remotely linked into the main SAS databanks to synchronize data and download new orders and maps. There is also a Sith incantation on the back of each tablet device that serves as a basic second-factor “password” for certain levels of data.

Inscription on the Back

(Haiku Sith incantation)

Knowledge is power
We must all understand that
Without it we fail.

It is our true strength
Not the saber or the Force
With our minds we grow.

Grant me thy wisdom
Share your secrets from within
And show me the way.

With this great power
I pledge to grow and strengthen
Our combined reputes.
