For all the glaring shortcomings the Matron has its own unique charms. In my last few visits I have become enamored with a location known as the Sinning Den. A neutral zone in a place full of fierce and often deadly rivalries between the local gangs. On my last visit to the Matron I spent most of my time and far too many credits in the Den. However I gained a few valuable contacts within some of the more prominent gangs on board. So the credits they acquired from me via Sabacc will most certainly make their way back into my pocket.

Personal note to investigate the name of that drink I enjoyed so many of as I can't seem to remember.

Earlier today I received a request from one of my contacts onboard the Matron. It seems that one of the smaller gangs is getting ready to make their move for power. My contact of course can't let their plan succeed. So I have been asked, for significant compensation, to assist in the solution to this lesser gang's plan. The dates requested line up well with my duties for the company.

The requested mission went well. The lesser gang will not be causing issues for a significant amount of time as they will need to replenish their forces. I still have plenty of time to enjoy the Matron and her amenities. I will be making a visit to the Sinning Den today, with any luck I will be able to find out the name of that drink I enjoyed so much last visit.

Arx, I can say with certainty that I do not like this planet. My only experience here is war though so I am biased. My visit to the Sinning Den on the Matron was enjoyable but was cut short when the Collective attacked. Since then I assisted in repelling the Collective from the Matron before making the descent to Eos city. Once at Eos I assisted the ground forces by providing sniper cover while they set up ground defenses. Almost bit the big one due to the incompetence of the other snipers. Thankfully I managed to fall back before the Collective artillery hit my location. At the new location I provided a short span of additional sniper support before joining up with others from Clan Vizsla.

Once I had joined with the others we assisted with the defense of Eos city. It was a long yet profitable day. The Shroud Syndicate should be beneficial in finding additional jobs needing our particular methods of resolution.

With the conflict on Arx in the rear view many of the Dark Jedi Brotherhood, a group that keep us in Vizsla on retainer, are considering their stance and feelings of security. None of the past few days bother me much in particular. What happens to the Brotherhood and their leadership is not much of my concern. They pay well, but I have never really cared for those spark fingers. Force users have a certain air and arrogance to them that has always rubbed me the wrong way. I do not think that the Collective is right in their methodology or actions, why would I want to exterminate a well paying clientele. Still at the same time I don't feel like I owe those spark fingers any loyalty. Their credits are good but not that good. I never did find out the name of that drink, once the Matron is repaired I'll have to head back to the den to figure it out.
