Aboard the Nesolat Platform is the sarcophagus of the Sith Lord Naga Sadow. It stands about six feet five inches tall. The sarcophagus itself is two pieces, a bottom section for a person to lay in and a cover to close them in. On the inside of the box it is bare other than an alcove in the side of it which is big enough to house a Sith sword. The inside of the sarcophagus suggests that each piece is a solid piece of metal from the lack of intersection lines that would occur when forming multiple pieces of metal together, or, simply, that the craftsmanship was so good that it did not produce these lines. When closely compared, it is noticed that these metals resemble that of a Sith sword, possibly cortosis, phrik, or both. On the exterior of the sarcophagus, the base is bare with decoration while the lid is exactly the opposite. Great time and detail were taken to coat the exterior of the lid with some kind golden metal to display wealth and power. Engraved in it is a cruel looking man that looks very human, but definitely not completely human due to the tentacles depicted coming from his face. His clothing is depicted of an era that is ancient, and possibly from another galaxy. His hands are covered with jewels as he appears to be holding a vicious appearing sword, stabbing at his feet.

If you sleep in this box,
You won't be affected by clocks.
Time will stand still,
For you to acquire more skill.

With life you can rule,
With emotions so cruel.
The power you maintain,
Will rule your domain.

Let death be denied,
While you are glorified.
Let life be eternal,
And to your enemies infernal.

Beware of the Jedi,
Whom you must defy.
But in the end,
You will transcend.
