

Shadow Academy Nesolat Platform is under attack. The Clans of the Brotherhood have the task of evacuating civilians from the platform and saving all the artifacts that are stored there. Fighting is raging across the platform and everyone is fulfilling their duties. So is Elyon de Neverse.

Elyon is a young girl of medium stature with long brown hair and blue eyes. Her task was to search all the warehouses on this floor because the platform workers could hide from the Collective soldiers. So she walked through the warehouse and looked for signs of workers or hidden artifacts.

She was happy for the task because she could be alone from all the fighting for a while. It reminds her a little of the time she served in The Clone Wars and fought against the Separatist Alliance. For the second time in her life, she is fighting in a war to save the fate of the galaxy, and for the second time she feels resistance to it. But that didn't mean he wouldn't do his duty to the Clan and the New Jedi Order. She was pensive as she entered another warehouse.

It was a half-filled room where boxes of various things were rolling, from tools to spare parts to repaired droids. She looked at one of the boxes as she felt a shudder of Force, and then she heard distant voices. She wasn't alone. Elyon focused on the Force and sent her mind closer to those voices who now sounded louder. She felt the anger, fear, and pain emanating from the opposite corner of the warehouse where the people stood.

Elyon, holding her lightsaber, slowly began to move forward, being careful not to be heard. Creeping across the warehouse and taking great pains to remain out of sight, she soon arrived in its opposite corner. She was met by an unpleasant sight. A group of ten platform workers were kneeling, and some were already wearing signs of beating. Above them stood a slender man in a hood, holding a blaster in his hand.

"I'll ask you again, Where are the artifacts?" said the hooded man, punching one of the workers in the head. The worker groaned and fell to his side. Elyon felt his pain and quickly decided how to proceed. When he calls the others, he will draw attention to herself and the man will be in a better position. She had to do it on her own, she thought after a moment, and decided to act.

She could see the man from her position, but he was too close to the workers and he could start firing at them if she will attack at him. So she grabbed the Force and raised her hand and threw the man against the wall. At that moment, she ran out of her hiding place, and the air cut through the noise of the man's impact on the warehouse wall, as well as the sound of her lightsaber, which she had just lit.

Elyon stopped in front of the workers and turned her attention to the man who tries to stand. His hood fell and Elyon finally see in his face, it was Falleen. His green skin darkened even more with rage, and there was hatred in his gray eyes.

"Jedi dirt," Falleen called to Elyon as he straightened. "You Force users will be destroyed once and for all," Falleen said and looked at Elyon. Elyon watched him calmly, her lightsaber held at the ready, using the Force to read the Falleen's emotions.

"Others have tried and failed," Elyon said in a firm voice, letting Falleen know she wasn't afraid of him. Falleen looked at her in disgust. He wasn't disguising his simple contempt for anyone sensitive to the Force.

"I'm Konnus Dreen and I'll kill you like the other dirt in front of you," Falleen said, hatefulness and cruelty in his words, and aimed his blaster at her. The next moment, Konnus started firing. At that moment, Elyon focused only on the Force, and her blue blade buzzed as she deflected the bolts. She attempted to redirect them back toward him, but those that hit quickly ricocheted from his coat.

The firefight lasted only a moment. Konnus stopped firing, realizing that he was simply wasting ammunition. But Elyon had been waiting for this moment. Using the Force to enhance her speed she shot forwards, splitting the blaster into two with one flick of her blade. Sparks rained from the ruined weapon as she lashed out with one kick, knocking the rest of the blaster out of his hand.

Konnus just staggered this time and also threw himself forward. Elyon quickly turned off her lightsaber and secured it on her belt, and the next moment she deflected Konnus's attack. She was trained to fight unarmed as well as Konnus. He fought by using his weight against Elyon. Konnus struck her many times but he was unable to inflict a fatal blow. Elyon wasn't defenseless either. She used the Force so that he could not overcome her defense. Elyon tried to push him further away from the workers so that Konnus could not use them as hostages.

The fight had been going on for several minutes, with neither of them gaining the upper hand. Elyon knew she had to eliminate him from the fight as soon as possible. So she jumped into the air and tried to stun him with two kicks to Konnus's head. Konnus could cover only first but not the other. Elyon fell to the ground at the same time as Konnus's limp body.

Elyon found a wire nearby and handcuffed him, then she called a unit of soldiers through her comlink who evacuated the platform workers and dragged Konnus away. She stood there for a moment, breathing fast, but then turned and went on to search the other warehouses.