

Origin of the Pantless Curse

In the beginning it was just a word - but it was a lie.

Let's start again - there were a few words which were spoken on planet Tython. Strong Force was coming from them, so Je'daai started to pass them to one another. As time passed song was written down in stone, and later kept as a secret artefact between ancient Force users. Why? Are You asking me? Continue reading, lazy, it won't be that easy.

Explanation is in further story of the stone. Je'daai who were chosen to protect it decided once to make a song from the words in the stone.

One Force user was playing flute and other singing, both looking at Ashla's moon. Suddenly the flute was broken and part of it cut belt of Je'daai who was singing- his pants fell off. As that made him angry he felt a dark side of Force growing inside him and he looked at Bogan's moon.

Rest of the story You know - You don't? Then study harder in Shadow Academy and read Wookipedia more often!

Stone was passed always to pair of Sith and Jedi, but always it didn't end well. Stone was moved to the planet Varl until the unexpected happened.

Both of them decided from getting bored to make a staring contest.

It was a long fight and their eyes started to be red. Sith started to be annoyed with it so, he used humming as a distraction to his rival. Jedi didn't want to give up so they started whistling. All this sounds made around a stone combined with Force and will. Released a power which cut the belts of both warriors, and also sent uncontrolled Force into space next to the planet and created a black hole. You should know what happened later, and I won't tell You!

Looking through history, even Order 66, has a big impact the Pantless Curse and stone which hold it within.

When Lord Sidious made a famous call, there was still rule of keeping the stone by two opposite Force users.

But Sith who take a keep didn't even blink his eyes and kill Jedi in quick battle - even though together they stayed on guard for almost 30 years. He wanted to make a gift for the Republic from Artefact, but when stone felt the sounds of crushing each other lightsabers, it revealed its power seconds after the killing of Jedi. That made Sith pants to fall down when he wanted to reach the stone, and he fell to the ground with tangled legs. Opportunities are to use so Great Oopik had a chance (and that's rare unexpected thing to happen!!) to grab it and fly away, because all of this has happened at the southern continent of Grxy!

Stone was lost for a while - and legend was gone as well. And here our Howlader shows up with a fishing rod during his holiday at Randorn 2. He was singing, whistling and making rhythm at the rod with his finger (Very musical by the way!) while fishing. He focused his force as well, he knew that something was swimming in his direction. He optimised all his senses and he caught the Ibliton! Huge carnivore showed up from under the water but Howie wasn't scared! He grabbed his lightsaber, and took down the creature! He made a stew (no one's judging!), He ate it but he didn't know that poor creature had a stone inside of it. He was very hungry, and he didn't mind eating hard body parts so he swallowed stone, while consuming his dish (POOR HOWIE!!!).

He never knew why he was losing his pants, but now You know. What?! You still don't know!? Hard intellect You have don't You?!

Quickly I will explain to You.

Howie likes to sing, and whistle but also his heart beat makes a nice rhythm. As a Great Jedi he has a big force cumulation, so in summary of all Artefact history - sound, stone and force- always made pants to fall off!