

Vigilant's Respite

The Respite isn't a big room when compared to the rest of the station. Roughly similar in size to a small city park, this artificial grotto exists as a place to escape the sensory assault of a medical station. Outside the doors are bright lights, the sounds of equipment and the cries of the pained, the smells of chemicals, and the hurried attitudes of thousands of medical professionals.

Crafted by the padawans and older younglings under the tutelage of Defender Raziel as part of his efforts to teach more life skills to the next generation, the Respite is a true artificial oasis. The lights are a perfect wavelength match to Kias't sun, and all of the soil, plants, and the water were imported directly from the planet.

Handcrafted benches can be found among the flora and waterways, granting a chance for some peace and quiet away from the frenetic energy of the rest of the station, and a hot drink stand can be found upon first entering the room, offering caf, tea, and light snacks.