

(credit: <https://www.starwars.com/news/this-is-pod racing-sports-in-the-star-wars-galaxy-part-1>)

Dandoran: Nevo Race Track Stadium

At the outskirts of Tipool City, the stadium stands as a massive structure for fans to gather to watch, drink and place bets on the races. Each section of the stadium features tiered seating for viewers to enjoy the event, with the seats closest to the track abundantly more exclusive and costly.

Beneath the stands, is a massive garage where the pod racers are stored, stretches beneath the viewers out of sight. This work area houses every possible tool, part or component the racers and their teams need to keep their pods ready to race at a moments notice. Warning signs abound in the area due to the number of flammable and dangerous components frequently in use.

Throughout the lower rungs of the stands, dozens of private viewing boxes are ensconced in protective shells. Where the most affluent of viewers can watch from any number of view screens or out through the shielded glass. Rumors have abounded for years that any number of clandestine meetings have taken place in these private venues, the noise and excitement of the races making a perfect place for business to take place under the illusion of simple entertainment.

Due to Dandoran's temperate weather, most of the stands are covered by simple tarps to provide shade and a measure of protection from the elements. With the only truly protected areas being the private boxes or lowest tiered seatings who enjoy the comfort of shelter from both the weather and any potential explosions on the track.