

Nevo Race Track - Night

The Nevo race track is the favourite haunt of both the honest and the criminal elements that plague Dandoran. Cut into the countryside and cliffs of the Qotho Peninsula the track itself is usually a hive of activity with races of all kinds taking part or the less desirable elements of the planet getting their kicks.

At night the race track takes on a darker aspect as gangs use it as their own personal playground, racing each other or tormenting some poor unfortunate souls. Rain lashes down, almost vertical and there is a taste of something you can't quite put your name on. Here and there lights can be seen dancing through the various parts of the track as gangers and hutt enforcers carry out their duties. Somewhere in the distance the hum of engines can be heard and you are never sure if they are approaching or moving away.

The area you are in is one of the busier parts of the track, and the most hazardous. Sharp hairpins wind through the trees before heading towards the cliff. The gangs use it frequently for their fun and whilst there are no natural buildings nearby caves set in the cliffs dot the landscape and trees standing tall create an extra layer of darkness.