

Dandoran - Black Market

Despite all the gaudiness of the Hutts and their labyrinth of golden eyesores across the landscape, the Blaxk Market is literally the correct name of this market square.

Everything is matte black in colour. And the population is just as seedy as the hues of the buildings and archways. If you are looking for a certain spice or need an encrypted terminal hacked into, this is the place you would find what you are searching for.

The local Hutt garrisons are under the table too and with the right amount of credits, they too will turn an eye to the dealings going on. But that doesn't stop them from extracting justice if any unsanctioned fights break out in the hub. So you would need to make sure to keep your head on a swivel and your cred chips buried deep to not attract the local pickpockets that roam the streets.