

Dandoran: Huttball Arena

Located in an isolated part of Dandoran stands a massive stadium capable of holding up to 45,000 live attendants: in the center of the durasteel stadium is the main attractions, the Huttball Arena. Py'zah the Hutt has spared no expense in building one of the finest stages for a favored blood sport of his species; it is a three-tiered arena with stairs and elevators dotting the arena to allow for various methods of vertical traversal. There are various terminals dotted throughout the arena that control laser and rocket turrets; other terminals control the ability to raise and lower various battlements and shield barriers for cover.

The ball is placed on a table at the highest point of the arena and the entire arena is suspended above a vat of carbonite that can be open and closed from one of the terminals; the goals and entrances for the teams are located at the northern and southern end of the arena, respectively. There is an environmental control center located near the broadcaster booth that can simulate various environmental effects such as sandstorms, blizzards, or thunderstorms to add a level of excitement to fights. When not used however the weather within the arena is fairly stable given the fact that the stadium itself is closed roofed, sheltering the arena and the audience from the elements of Dandoran.