

Fiction - A Venue to Die For
Hades #8596

Name: Hutt Warehouse - Dandoran

Near the Garganta Galleria Casino Hotel is a large, nondescript gray warehouse that holds 80,000 square feet of interior space. It is mostly filled with large containers of various types that can be used either strictly in the atmosphere or in the vacuum of space. This warehouse is the property of the Hutt Cartel and several Hutt crime lords have various goods in storage here, from exotic weapons, to spice and food, to sinister items they would want kept secret.

The containers are lined up in large rows with 10 foot wide avenues between them but they are stacked over 100 foot tall with some variations in heights between containers. Above the stacks of containers is a magnetic lift system designed to move the containers with ease and place them on a platform at the western wall of the warehouse. This wall is where all containers either arrive or depart. The western wall is also the only entrance for droids or humanoids to enter as the remaining walls are made from durasteel 8 feet thick. Approximately 150 feet above the warehouse floor on the western wall is a control room for the magnetic lift system. This room also serves as a barracks for the roughly 15 security personnel trusted with guarding the Hutt's secrets. A large freight turbolift is to the right of the control room that can take the containers to a guarded landing pad on the roof of the warehouse. A dual-laser cannon emplacement is at each corner of the warehouse to prevent unauthorized removal of any container stored within.

The containers in this warehouse are kept in place by natural gravity, thus it is possible to move the containers through various means.