

Occultan slowly wiped down the disassembled parts of his WESTAR-M5 blaster rifle. The old cloth was greasy with gun oil. Not so greasy that it caused a mess, but the perfect amount so that it left the right amount of oil on the metal. The weapon cleaning process was slow but necessary. Better to prepare ahead of time, making sure the weapon was properly maintained, than to have a malfunction in the field. Satisfied with the M5, the Mandalorian carefully reassembled it. Setting the blaster rifle aside he picked up one of his two WESTAR-35 blaster pistols.

After a few hours lacul had finished his weapons cleaning and maintenance. The blasters and explosives set carefully in a row, accounted for, ready to be packed. He next turned his attention to the multiple sets of Mandalorian armor he owned. With each piece of the armor he would carefully examine, clean, then oil it. Each piece after being maintained would be set in a row next to other pieces from its set.

Finally Occultan set out several bags. He carefully packed his armor into their own bags. Except for the set he would wear at the beginning of the hunt. Then he packed two backpacks, one for each of his gear sets depending on what he would need. After packing he set the bags by the door and grabbed a datapad. The Mandalorian carefully read the hunt details three times making sure to remember them. His preparations complete, he sat back in his chair, waiting for his departure time.