

Ohan'da

→ Population: 150

A small, humble village that does trade with the nearby Vespian Isles. Ice fishing is the primary resource, and the small huts have been built to weather the harsh tundra. Generations of tribe members have evolved to have tough skin and angular features from eating lean diets mostly pescetarian in nature. Salts and other essentials, spices and preservatives and small cook fires are a big reason trade and connection with the Isles is important to their survival.

All in all, these people have been on Selen just as long as some of the natives, their forefathers having crash landed and made due with what they could by mating with any natives that happened to wander, get lost, and eventually join their tribe.

The great lakes of ice are their domain, and they have perfected the art of co-existing with the elements.