

Intupiak Village

Intupiak is a village in the sense that it contains homes and people. However, its location, structures, and people are not static. Intupiak is home to a population of several dozen families — some hundred or so people — that nomadically range between the northern mountains, alpine regions north and south, and the oceanic coasts. While they are largely subsistence-based, they do offer goods and services to the scientific survey teams from Zainab.