Description

The Geode Bozami is an eight-legged beast mutated from an original Bonzami species native to Geonosian moons. Their size is half again as large as the original species, and each beast has four true legs and four additional crystalline appendages acting as grasping and support structures to the ambulatory limbs. Their thick hides are partially composed of a bioorganic geological compound, resembling metamorphic rock. These hardened plates, or geodes, display eruptions of crystal growth, and the plates regrow and extend when damaged, older layers undergoing subduction into the dermal layers as the new ones grow over it. Over time, these layers of growth can resemble sedimentary layers, growing higher and thicker, making a sporadic shell plate. The Geode Bonzami's axe-shaped jaw is made not of bone but entirely of pure crystal, jagged edged and sharp, a natural slicing weapon the animal can use to charge predator or prey. Both crystal and crystal geode and rock layers are all completely resistant to energy-based attacks, including small and large arms fire, lightsabers, and lightning. The crystal axe-head is prone to breaking or chipping, and regrows at a rapid rate, provided the animal has adequate energy to do so. Crystal spines jut from its long tail, making the limb a fatal bludgeoning weapon. Unlike typical Bonzami, Geode Bonzami are aggressive and given to rampaging at any intrusion of their territory.

Granted Item Aspects

Untameable : [this item] is wild, and its behavior cannot be modified to accept the presence of humanoids. It cannot be trained to abandon its wild instincts and will generally continue to do whatever it wants. As creature handling goes up, a character can better predict what this creature will do and empathize and understand it despite being unable to tame it. With proficiency (+3) a member could manage to successfully own and cage this creature but not safely interact with it and influence its behavior, with a better understanding and ability to manage this [this item] coming with mastery (+5).
