

The above two images are the final product: a lightsaber chassis using one of the 'purified/bled' variants as described in the Phase two fiction release. The crystal is removable from the chassis, as shown.

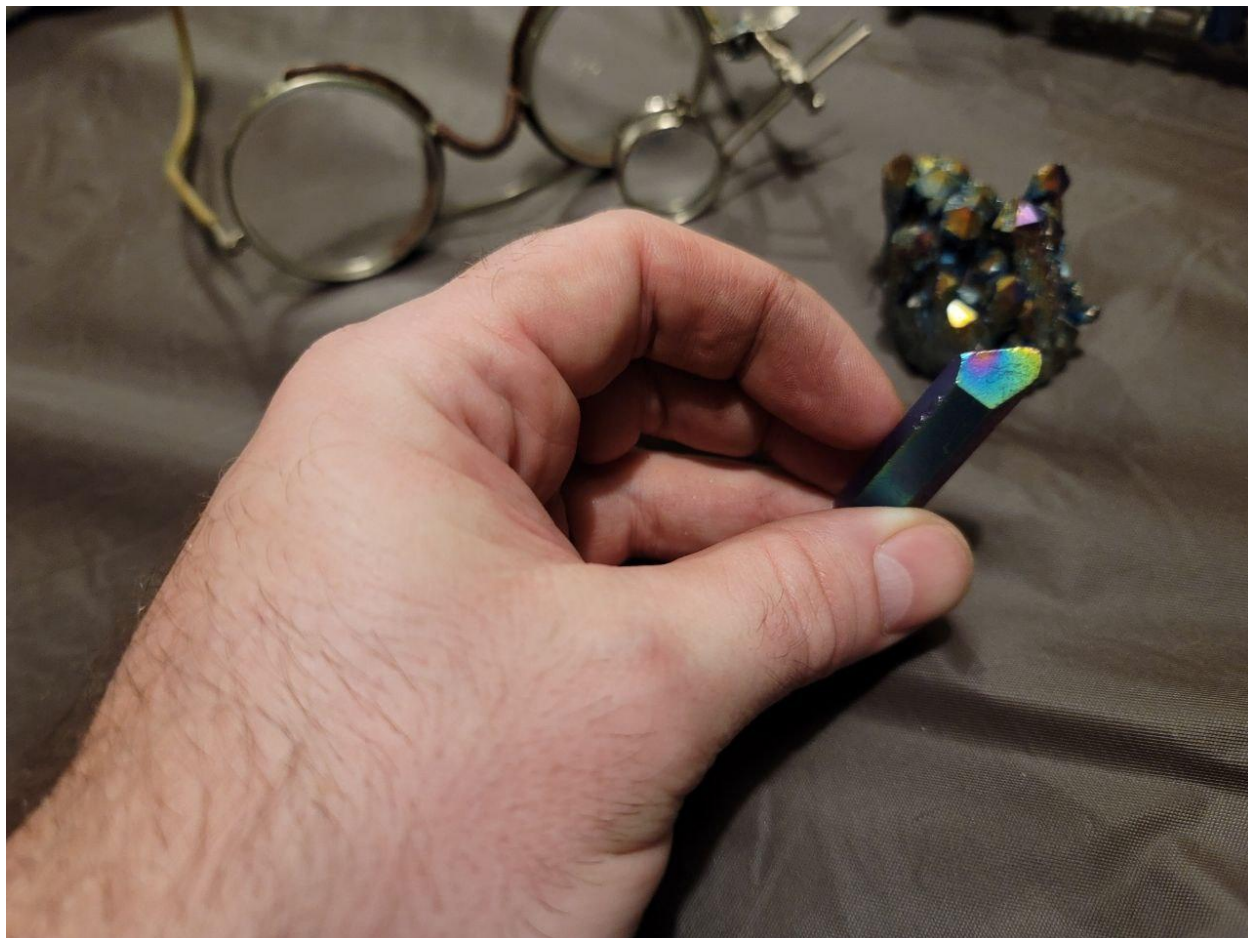

—Muz Ashen Keibatsu #3714

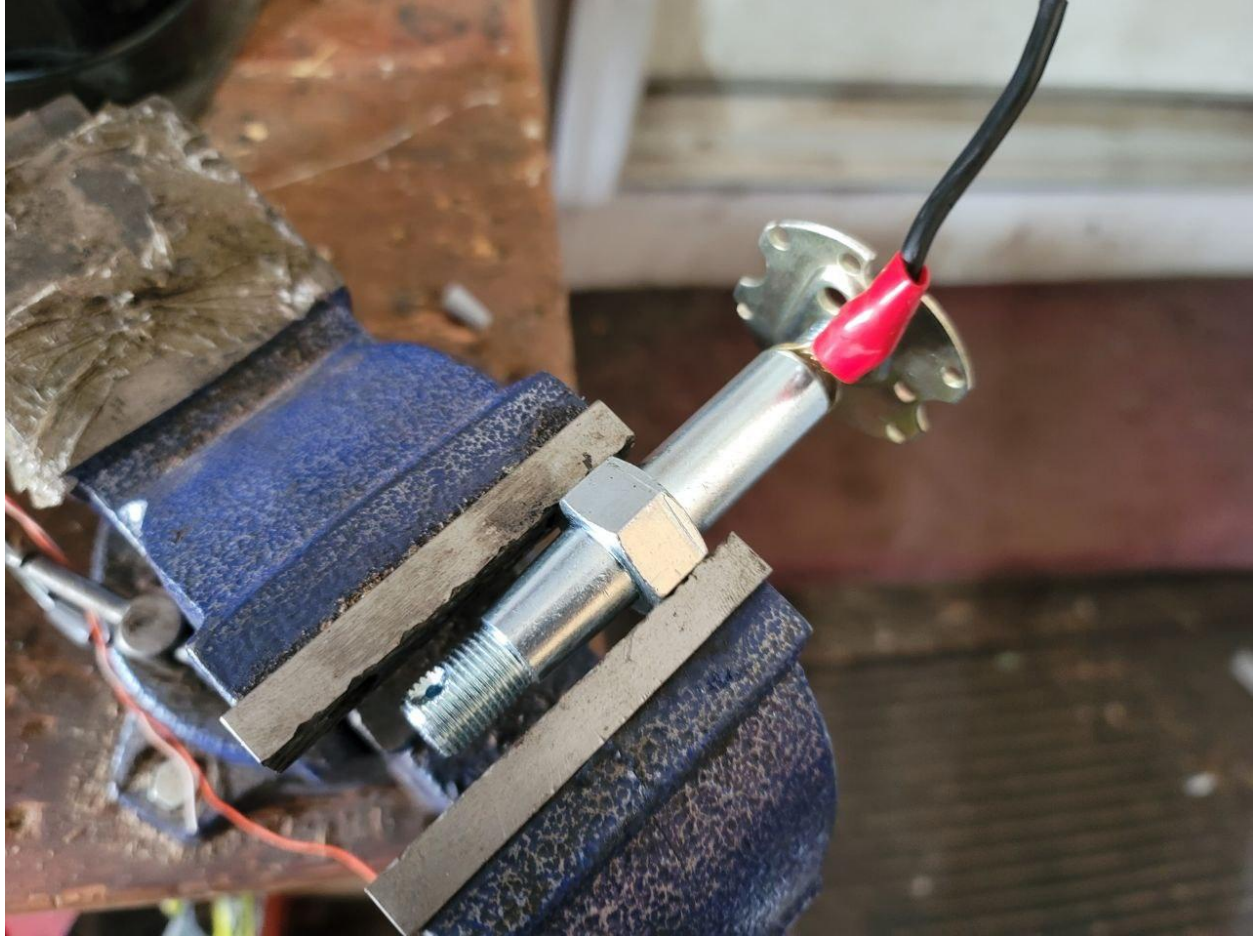

What follows are some pictures from the build itself.

The crystal is quartz that has been treated to have a fine layer of titanium oxide on the surface in order to achieve the 'iridescent' effect.

Apologies for the lack of staging in the workshop. My vehicle had a relatively major issue and the whole garage is in disarray while I've been working on it, which is why I had to constrain myself to the top of the recycling bin.