

A few kilometers south of Aliso City sits the impact site of the Children of Mortis crystal. A massive crater forms the central pit of the crystal city, with deep red crystals spreading out in a near perfect circle nearly a kilometer in diameter. A makeshift industrial looking city has grown up out of the crystals, forming unnaturally arranged streets between the jagged crystal buildings of various sizes and shapes, some are large squat warehouses no higher than two stories while others are tall and slim reaching up to five stories in height. The terrain in the Crystal City is difficult to traverse at any great speed due to the uneven surface the crystals provide.

The sky over the Crystal City has taken a red hue due to the reflection of light off of the crystals and the electricity that emanates off of the crystals.