

Do'Gaang's is an unofficially sanctioned off-site betting establishment hidden in the back of Noo Do's Noodle emporium near the D&D Construction Yards in Aliso City. Do'Gaang's has become famous amongst the gamblers of Aliso as having the planet's best connection to live sports from across the galaxy on its holomonitors, though that is not saying a lot as the connection is tenuous at best.

From the outside, the noodle shop is barely a hole in the wall, just a single door and a grease covered window that one can barely see more than rough shapes through. On the inside, the dingy room that hosts Do'Gaang's is, in stark contrast to the noodle shops one must travel through to enter, is consistently filled with citizens of Aliso looking to gamble their money away on the Canto Bight Fathier races and other similar activities. Neither portion of the building are kept particularly clean and one review of Noo Do's once read "Probably the worst noodles in the Galaxy, and I've been to Tatooine!". The poor reviews and grungy atmosphere of Noo Do's has left the non-gambling and naive citizens of Aliso completely flummoxed for years.

While Do'Gaang's is an illegal establishment, Clan Plagueis takes a cut of all earnings as a security fee allowing them to drain the finances of the citizens of Aliso even further.