

The Tiger Den is a drinking establishment located near the Crucible in the Soresu desert of planet Arx. The Tiger Den follows the design of a traditional mandalorian drinking hall complete with a large sandpit prominently located near the fireplace which allows for organized or impromptu contests of strength. The increased flow of warriors from across the Brotherhood coming to train at the Crucible following the Children of Mortis attacking necessitated the need for more living and recreational facilities.

The walls and floor are dark colored sandstone to match the surrounding desert environment. The furniture is durasteel with a polished finish. The bar is tended by serving droids and stocked with spirits imported from across Brotherhood space. The walls are decorated with the skulls of large creatures, fitting with mandalorian tradition.

While there is space at the bar the main fixture in the bar is a lengthy wooden table hand-crafted in the traditional mandalorian style with chairs for thirty. Smaller four or eight person tables fill out the rest of the drinking hall. There is also a stage for live performers to provide ambience but also an electronic jukebox with an assortment of music.

The venue was renovated from an old storehouse and dedicated as the Tiger Den to honor Rajhin Cindertail who was Fist at the time of the dedication.